Dear Sarah:

I am happy to learn that you are interested in doing a report on the pronghorn. Unfortunately, this office has very little information about the pronghorn to send to you. A subspecies of the pronghorn, the Sonoran pronghorn, is an endangered species, and this office is responsible for its management. We have a lot of information about the Sonoran pronghorn, but it is written for scientists and is difficult to understand. I am sending you a map of the present and historic range, and a short description of the animal and its problems.

I am also sending you some general information which I hope will help you understand what your government is doing for endangered and threatened species.

If I can help you further, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Sue Rutman
Endangered Species Specialist
